Lisa Bane's work can be found in homes all across the United States as well as in Canada and South America. This exciting artist has a background in graphic design, is largely self-taught, and has taken an intensive portrait painting workshop by renowned artist, Ellen Cooper. Lisa has been doing commission portraiture for over 6 years.

Artist's Comments: "Portrait drawing isn't as hard as it looks, really! This class will show you how to capture a likeness by following a few simple rules. You will learn how to find accurate placement of features, how to create a 3-dimensional look, and how to work with charcoal."

Lisa will guide the class through a fun and interesting portrait drawing lesson that will help participants to draw what they see rather than what they know... and there will be a surprise ending!
